PITTSBURG, PA

Result of First Day's Balloting at Harrisburg.

THE SENATOR GOT 112 VOTES.

Losch and Shaw of the Anti-Quayites Voted For Quay-All Democrats Except Timlin Cast Their Ballots For Jenks. Anti-Quayites D vided Votes.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 18.-The end of the first day's fight in the battle for United States senator leaves the result very much in doubt. It is Senator Quay against the field and the indications are that there will be a deadlock lasting some days at least. The Republicans are divided between Mr. Quay and and William F. Wadsworth-total, 9. eight "favorite sons," and the Democrats are united on George A. Jenks. The senate and house voted separately and they will take a ballot today in joint session.

There was no election and should the ballot show no election today the balloting will continue daily until election is made. Senator Quay's total strength in both houses was 112 votes, 16 less than the number necessary to elect on joint bailot assuming that the full menibership or 254 is present, a condition are several on the sick list now.

The first ballot showed that there was practically no break in the line of either of the Republican factions. Of the original signers to the anti-Quay pledge Senator Samuel A. Lesch of Schuylkill and Representative John I. Shaw of Aliegheuy voted for Senator Quay. Representative Frank L. Sny. der of Luzerne, who was too ill to qual ify when the legislature organized, took his seat. He was claimed by both factions and pleased neither by voting for Alvin Markle, the Hazleton millionaire coal operator and banker.

The 51 Republican senators and members who signed the second anti-Quay pledge voted as they promised. Representative Clinton Rogers Woodruff of Philadelphia, who was opposed to Senator Quay, but declined to act with his opponents, voted for President Judge Charles E. Rice of the superior court. This made 52 votes which the anti-Quay leaders claim Senator Quay cannot get while he is a candidate. Representa-tive Timlin (Dem.) of Lackawanna, cast his ballot for Superior Court Juage Peter P. Smith of Scranton. He was the only Democrat who failed to vote for Jenks, the party choice. The essence of the situation is that so long as the anti-Quay Republicans are united and the Democrats vote for jenks. Senator Quay cannot be reelected. His friends are confident, however, that he will steadily gain votes after today, while the leaders of the other side are just as confident that ne has reached the high-water mark. Governor Stone is the senator's friend and is aiding him in his campaign. The senator is on the ground managing his canvass, and expects to stay during the early stages of the contest.

The anti-quay Republican senators and members agreed to meet daily until the fight is settled. They are divided on congressmen Dalzeli and Stone and other independent Republicans. Their leaders say it is too early to concentrate on one candidate against Senator Quay. There does not seem to be any prospects of a combination between the anti-Quay Republicans and the Democrats on the senatorship. Although not a single vote was cast in either house for senator Chris L. Magee of Pittsburg, he is regarded as a most important factor in the contest.

He has for years been opposed to Senator Quay's control of the state, but he declined to stay away from the Republican caucus, of which he was made the nominee, and voted for him during the balloting. The Pittsburg senator and his friends took part in the caucus and showed their opposition to Mr. Quay by voting for B. F. Jones of Pitts-Before the vote was announced Mr. Magee moved to make senator Quay's nomination unanimous. The motion carried, and the Pittsburg senator has since abided by the decision of the caucus This has made him popular with the friends of Senator Quay and did not apparently diminish his popularity with the anti-Quay Republicans. Many of Senator Magee's friends in both factious are predicting that their favorite will be chosen to succeed Senator Quay in the event of it being demonstrated that the latter cannot

JENKS FOR FUSION.

Willing to Throw His Strength to Any One Who Can Beat Quay.

Bradford, Jan. 18.—Hon. George A. Jenks, who had been looking after the interests of one of his clients in the court of McKean county, left this evening for Harrisburg. In a chat with a reporter Mr. Jenks expressed himself in favor of the fusion idea in his senatorial fight.

"If the Democrats and anti-Quay Republicans stand together in this coutest," he said, "I believe Quay can be defeated. I will go to Harrisburg and if I find that any one of the various candidates can muster enough strength to overcome the Quay vote, I will certainly throw my strength to such candidate. I believe that it is my duty to the state and the country to do this."

TROOPS ABOARD TRANSPORT

The Grant, With Lawton and Troops, Expected to Get Under Way Today.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 .- Amid the waving of handkerchiefs and general farewells the United States army transport Grant, with Major General W. Lawton and 1,800 troops on board, bound for Manila, pulled out from pier 22, East river, Brooklyn, last night and proceeded to a point off Liberty island, where she dropped anchor to remain until today.

General Robert A. Hall of the Fourth regiment will be in command of all the troops on board the transport, Major General Lawton and his staff going as passengers. A few of the men on board managed to obtain a short leave of absence and two of them failed to return within the time limit. They were taken in custody by the police of the Fifty-third precinct and brought to the ve-sel in a patrol wagon.

They were given in charge of the corporal of the guard and consigned to the guardroom at once.

General Lawton arrived about the same hour, and was followed soon after by the memoers of his staff. There were four Red Cross nurses aboard. Members of the house and senate committees, Adjutant General Corbin and several other army officers reached the city early this morning, boarded the Grant and made a thorough inspection.

SOLDIER MAY DIE.

Private Hughes Understood to Have Been Found Gnilty by a Courtmartial.

HAVANA, Jan. 18 .- The trial of private Joseph Buckley, Company E, Sec. ond Louisiana volunteers, for the killing of private John D. Hughes of the same company on January 7, was concluded at Marianao. It is understood that the finding of the court is for the death of the accused, but the verdict will not be announced until it has been reviewed in the usual way. In answering Buckley's plea of idsanity the prosecution brought forward officers of the regiment and Buckley's comrades, who testified that his behavior prior to the killing had shown no signs that he was mentally unbalanced.

Of the four hundred policemen who have been provisionally accepted for service in Havana in the reconstituted force no fewer than one hundred, it is said, are Spaniards. Chief of Police Menocal has decided to appoint his three brothers as inspectors.

WANTS HEROES REWARDED.

President McKinley Wrote to Congress Regarding Rescue of Whalers. WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—President Mc-

Kinley sent a message to congress recounting as "another glorious page in the history of American seamen" the valorous deeds of the officers an' men of the revenue cutter Bear in rescuing the imperiled whaling fleet in Arctic waters last year.

The president concluded by asking the thanks of congress to the officers and men of the party, with gold medals of honor to those of the overland expedition, and $2,500 for the bestowal of rewards to W. T. Lopp and native herders who aided the relief expedition. ## # X

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Comptroller Tracewell of the treasury has modified a former decision regarding the pay of volunteer soldiers, in which he held

"No deductions should be made by the pay department from the pay that would be due a soldier under the act of July 7, 1898, on account of any payment that may have been made under the state militia law to him by the governor or state authorities from the date of his enrollment or joining for duty to the date of his acceptance into the volunteer army of the United States. Washington, Jan. 18 .- The president announced to the cabinet that he had decided to order a courtmartial to try Commissiary General Eagan for the he went to New Orieans, where an uncle, abusive and volent language he had lived, and continued his school work in the used respecting Major General Nelson A. Miles while on the witness stand before the war investigating commission last Thursday.

Before the cabinet session he held a conference with the secretary of war and Adjutant General Corbin. It was not long in duration, but the action to follow General Eagan's utterances was decided and when the cabinet met the president announced that he had reached his decision in the matter. He said he had determined that there was only one course to adopt and that was to order a courtmartial to be convened at once to try General Eagan. The decision met the unanimous approval of the members of the cabinet. Three of the president's official advisors, secretary Alger, Secretary Wilson and Postmaster General Emory Smith, were absent, but in each instance their views are known to coincide thoroughly with the president's decision.

Secretary Aiger spent some time at his house with Adjutant General Corbin. He left for New York late last night.

It is a well known fact that many of the senators and congressmen are not in favor of annexing any of the territory taken from Spain. It has been learned from persons who are in a position to know, however, that a large majority of both the house and senate are in favor of taking in all of the new possessions. Yet, it is said there will be some lively debates regarding the matter. Already several of the senators have had a "go" at the subject. This, however, is only the preliminary of what is to follow Secretary of State Hay and Attorney General Griggs have been in consultation with the president, and, it is presumed, concerning the treaty. Neither of them would be interviewed, and when questioned as to what the nature of their visit to the executive mansion was would only smile and look wise.

The treaty is not the only matter which will come before congress which will be of interest. It is safe to say that before the end of the session they will have their hands full, and this session will go down in history as one of the most remarkable in the existence of that august body

At the war department everybody is busy preparing papers for mustering out many of the volunteer regiments that are doing duty in Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines. They are also getting ready for the reorganization of the regular forces. The Hull bill, with several amendments, has been accepted by the house committee on military affairs, but it is far from becoming a law. It is claimed by some that Adjutant General Corbin and Secretary Alger are in favor of the Hull bill and would like to have it passed. There are many of the senators and congressmen, however, who look upon the Hawley bill (which is the same as that of General Miles) with favor and believe it to be the best for the reorganization. Many of the senators and congressmen have declared their intentions of speaking on the matter before the measures are put to a vote. Whether it be a lieutenant general or general, General Miles seems to be the most favored candidate. In military circles, in fact, one can scarcely go anywhere without hearing his name mentioned for the new rank. There is every indication that the Nicaraguan canal bill will be acted on There seems now to be very little opposition to the matter. The representarives of the company have been in the city for some time, and have had seval conferences with some of the congressmen and senators. No positive information of what has been done toward having the bill presented can be had. Some say that the Bulwer-Clayton treaty stands in the way of the goverument baying anything to do with building the canal. Others say that the treaty will be annulled, and that the work will be begun as soon as po-sible. No one, however, who knows about the matter will speak on it excepting to say the bill is likely to be presented before congress adjourne.

There are other matters that are attracting attention here. One of the foremost is the proposed new executive mansion. The plans for the building have been prepared by Paul J Petz, the architect of the congressional library, and are drawn to a scale which will put the building in close rivalry with many of the more prominent palaces of Europe Like the congressional library, the new White House will be a splendid specimen of architecture. Many places have been suggested as a site for the building, but Meridan bill seems to be the most acceptable. It is one of the highest points in the city. It is double the height of the foundation site of the capitol, the latter being 90 feet and the former more than 200 feet from the high tide water of the Poto mac. GOLD IN CANADA.

Part of Ontario.

[Special Correspondence] TORONTO, Jan 9 .- The easy accessibility, abundant surface indications, cheapness of supplies, favorable laws. perfect titles and low purchase price of the land make the western Ontario Indians, and even of the latter more goldfields a regular paradise for the prospector.

Even if you are totally without capiminerals, a "girb stake" usually can be secured with the greatest of ease. In that case the good angel provides the supplies and the prospector hunts for gold. If a desirable find is made, the grab stake man advances money to pay price of the land, and the two parties pony, still bridled and saddled, was also hold equal interests.

In these mining districts pack animals are totally unknown, but, owing to the great number of lakes and streams, a canoe is an absolute necessi-The Peterboro is a favorite and a good two man canoe: can be had for $30. After a canoe you need a tent. One by 7 feet with 2 foot walls can be had or $7.50. Next comes a light ax, a shovel, pole pick, a one quart mortar, pestle, sieve and gold pan. In regious where refractory ores abound the prospector is dependent upon the assayer for proof or evidence of values, but the ignly free milling ores of western Ontano can be satisfactorily tested by

The tip baker, plates, knives, forks, poons, frying pau, cups, a nest of tin buckets and basins are all necessities Including a tent, an outfit to that extent will cost from $20 to $25. Of course each man will need a pack sack and blankers, a revolver or small rifle for game and fishing tackle.

Provisions for two men cost about $10 a mouth. For the inner man, who always is strongly in evidence when pros pecting, you will require flour, bacon, salt, sugar, baking powder, tea and coftee These articles, with matches, are you have enough for the whole trip.

The experienced prospector usually pitches a camp and works from that until he has enough of the surrounding country prospected to make another move necessary. He does his cooking in the evening, and in the morning, while the days is on "pays" the samples of specific Co. If the vein is of satisfactory size and appearance and the took pans gold, he considers he has found something worth taking up, but ordinarily it he gets no "color" in his pan he passes it up. About 8 a. m. at the latest the prospector starts out from camp for his day's work. One of the best and most successful discovererof gold bearing rock in western Outano works as I have minicated, and also takes a lunch along so that he does not have to return to camp for dinner. He does not take much time at noon and moves first enough so that he often feels warranted in returning to camp at 4 p m. He then cooks, performs other camp duties, eats supper and prepares for the next day. Some prospectors carry heavy packs and outfits on their backs all day and camp right where night catches them. That is hard work, and ordinarily does not pay. They soon learn to stop it.

When a prospector makes a find of mmeral and wishes to take up the land which bears it, he first must mark it, which usually is done by blazing a tree in one or two conspicuous places and then making an inscription something

The application must be accompanied by an affidavit that he has disrovered valuable mineral thereon and Within 60 days of the application be must pay to the department one-quarter of the sum necessary to purchase the location, or one-fourth of the first year's rental, and within three months after the date of application the balance of department. The applicant must alwithin four months file proper plans and field notes by a properly authorized Ontario land surveyor.

Dangers of Pony Express Riding.

In The Century there is an article on 'The Pony Express,' between St. Joeph, Mo., and San Francisco, written by W. F. Bailey. The author says:

Considering the danger encountered, the percentage of fatalities was extraordinarily small. Far more station employers than riders were killed by the were killed off duty than on This can be explained by the fact that the horses furnished the riders, selected as they tal, but have the slightest knowledge of were for speed and endurance, were far superior to the mounts of the Indians.

There is only one case on record where a rider was caught, and that was pwing to his having been surrounded. This occurred in Nebraska, along the Platte river. He was shot, and several for the official survey, the purchase days later his body was found. His tound with the mail intact. It was transferred to another horse and soon forwarded to its destination. In laying out the route through the Indian counry pains were taken to avoid anything that would afford cover for an ambush-

One of the greatest dangers encountered by the pony express riders was from immigrants and others who mistook them for Indians. In those days it was shoot first and investigate afterward, provided the shooter survived to make an investigation. A number of the ciders met their death in this way, being mistaken for Indians, horse thieves or road agents. It is a strange but notable fact that the Indians often stood and saw the daring riders fly past without offering to molest them. There was a mystery about it that made it "bad medicine" to interfere with them. Su perstitious as they were, they seldom bothered with anything that they could

First, some-directors, and the transaction of any body must make affidavit that somebody other business that may come before the else's insane. Then the probate judge holds an inquest and examines witnesses. The law says that one of these must be a physician. About the others it is not so particular. If the judge is satished that the person is insane, that settles it: he is sent to the asylum. At the institution he is registered and numbered, and the addresses of his relatives or friends, if he has any, are taken. He is an ordinary patient after that. Under ordinary circumstances the alleged insane person need not be brought into court. The probate judge has but to visit him. If the insanity of an accused individual is disputed, however, he must be given a hearing and witnesses for both sides examined.

A Curious Case of Somnambalism.

The modern novelist is very prone to found his plots on the doings of sleepwalkers and hypnotists, but, as usual, "truth is stranger than fiction," and his efforts are outdone by actual occurrences. Here, for example, is a true story from France of a gentleman massing from his bedroom a packet containing more than £2,000 worth of bonds. The thief could not be traced, but shortly afterward the mistress of the house, who had taken the robbery to heart even more than her husband, was taken to a doctor, for she was suffering from nervous prostration

The doctor, a firm believer in hyp notism, was told of the robbery and, putting two and two together, hypnotiz ed his patient and extorted a confession from her that she had taken the bonds and buried them in the garden. There, upon search being made, they were found, but the lady is as yet quite ignorapt of the fact that she herself was the person who hid them. Chambers Journal

A London Oculist Asserts That There Are Such Artists.

To speak of a color blind artist sounds like joking, said a noted conlist; but, strange as it seems, there are several persons so affected who can nevertheless paint extremely well. Numbers of color blind people there are, of course, who draw perfectly in pencil, ink and crayons, but I myself know a scene painter attached to a provincial theater who, though "color blind," paints all its scenery, and has quite a local name, not only for his "interiors" and oak chambers, but even for landscapes.

I can tell you also of two London ladies who consulted me for color blindness who paint really beautiful pictures. One is the daughter of a late famous artist and was taught painting by her father. More than 11,000,000 votes were cast at the recent election in the states which participated in them, notwithstanding the fact that minor offices only were voted for at some of them. In the presidential election of 1896 the total popular plurality in 1898 was larger than in the presidential election preceding.

The would be defenders of Aguinaldo and his followers are now holding up the down-trodden red man as an example of the destiny awaiting the inhabitants of our recent territorial acquisition. The fact that the United States will this year appropriate $2,500,000 for Indian schools offers, of course, only an increased evidence of the dark future in store for the proteges of the American administra-

John Barrett, ex-minister of the Uni ted States to Siam, has some sound views upon the Philippine situation, which were expressed in a speech made at a recent meeting of the chamber of commerce at Shanghai. Mr. Barrett believes that the opponents of expansion in this country do not realize the unlimited opportunities that will be lost if the United States does not hold the islands and that the extension of American trade and influence in East Asia are mainly dependent upon one controlling them. The difficulties of governing the islands have been exaggerated in Mr. Barrett's opinion, and Aguinaldo and his followers can be pacified by firm diplomacy.

Demonstration of the fact that this nation is able to build warships as cheaply as they can be built in other countries has been made by the placing of orders in several American shippards by the governments of Japan and Russia. This is undoubtedly only the beginning of a development in the direction of constructing warships in this country for other nations, the limits of which cannot be predicted. If, in addition to this, measures can be enacted by congress for the encouragement of the carrying of our foreign commerce in American built and American manned ships, opportunities for the profitable employment of American capital and labor will be largely increased, and the United States will have made long strides in the direction of commercial expansion and maritime development.

An article in the New York Sun on "The Nations Tax-Paying Ability" shows how easily the country has borne the increased taxation imposed by the Dingley tariff act and by the war revenue act. "In addition," it continues, "our citizens were able, from their own resources, to lend the government last summer $200,000,000, and at the same time they have repurchased from foreign holders several hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of securities which they had sold them in previous years, besides importing $100 000,000 in gold, and lending to foreign borrowers another $100,-000,000 out of the excess of our exports of commodities over our imports. Taking into account our home investments in buildings, manufactories and other industrial enterprises, it is fair to estimate the surplus earnings of the nation, during the past year, at considerably over $500,000,000 ''

Among the reasons why the Philippine government should be reorganized, as set forth by Agoncillo in his letter to the state department, is the following: "American precept and example have influenced my people to desire independent government." It is interesting to note in this connection the opinion of the Rev. Dr. Hykes, who has just returned from Manila, and whose impressions regarding the Filippinos have been extensively published. Dr. Hykes

"I believe that if Western influence were to be entirely withdrawn civilization would spontaneously die out in the Philippines. The mass of the people are ignorant in the extreme, and they are not prepared and will not be prepared for many years for self-government. It will be generations before their aspirations to become an independent commonwealth ought to be realized."

It is to be hoped that re-awake ed interest in the long deferred plan for building electric lines to Dalton and Navarre will not die out because it has been found that certain legal technicalities stand in the way of carrying out Councilman Kramer's plan proposing to bond the city for $100,000. There remain other methods, which if promptly and energetically pushed, will secure the necessary funds, and a first move in this direction should be the collection of that $3000 bond, long since forfeited by the Canton-Massillon electric railway company. The advan tages to be gained by the building of the two roads are so obvious and have been so frequently set forth, that little remains to be said except to urge that whatever can be done in a matter of such immense importance to the city be done as soon as possible.

Then he expatiates upon his known standing with the goddess, and asserts that his prayers are sure to be answered. During all this time the victim has been listening patiently, for there is no greater offense in the category of sins than to assault a kahuna of good repute

Two days after his first visit the kahuna again calls on his victim. The wretched offender may have gone to another pair of the island, or he may have hidden in some of the groves, but the kahuna finds him. During the time which has elapsed since the first notification that he was to be prayed to death the Kanakas have attributed every evil that has befallen him to the bad influence of the powerful kahuna his enemy has employed. This time, unless there is an immediate satisfactory adjustment of the difficulties, the kahuna announces that he will not this work. leave him until he dies. Quite often the kahura on his second visit is met by another kahuna who has been employed by the persecute done. In such cases the the kuhunus retire to some secluded spot and consult. FOOD THAT INJURES.

THINGS THAT AFFLICTED PERSONS SHOULD NOT EAT.

If You Have a Tendency to Gout. Shun Meat as You Would Torture. A Little Advice to the Creat Army of Sufferers From Dyspepsia,

A physician, writing in the Philadelphia Inquirer on "Foods and Their Effect on the Human System," says:

That out of sorts feeling from which most of us suffer half the days of our life is usually due to our eating things we shouldn't. Although we are constructed on the same monel, scarcely any two people have bauctly the same kind of heart, liver and other organs, and as a result nothing is truer than the saying that "One man's meat is another man's poison."

Meat, for instance, is a slow poison to a number of individuals. If there is a gouty strain in your family, you are storing up future torture for yourself every time you eat a chop or piece of beef. Gout is simply the result of too is full of the material from which uric acid is made.

You may think that so long as you have not to sit in an easy chair all day there is no need for precautions in diet. But the first symptoms are always mild, and it you feel irritable and unable to settle down to work you had latter be careful how much meat you eat. Englishmen are said to be the worst tempered people on earth. They are also the most gonty, and there can be no doubt that they are the greatest meat eaters.

lafeguards Employed in England in Making Small Remittances. Americans who are buying books in small quantities or are remitting dues to the treasurers of English societies of which they happen to be members occasionally receive a printed or written request to use a "crossed" order when sending money. At first they are likely to be mystified by the phrase. Even if inquiry is made at the postoffice in this country it is quite possible that no satisfactory explanation will be obtainable. The remarting party will ascertain. though, that American postoffices do not issue "crossed" orders.

The term in question refers to two lines drawn with a pen from the top to the bottom of a postal order on its face near the middle and an inch or two agart. That treatment of a money order will prevent payment of it to any one but a banker, and if, as is sometimes done, the name of some particular bank is written in the space between the lines the order will be paid only to that institution. It is not necessary to use any words in addition to the name of much uric acid in the blood, and meat the bank. No explicit prohibition is required. The mere crossing of the order is a well understood signal to the Britisb postal authorities, for, while the custom is comparatively unfamiliar to people on this side of the Atlantic, it is common enough in the United King-

When an American remits money in this manner, he crosses his order himself, but in several foreign countries the postoffice does not give the order to the sender, but transmits it directly to the paying office. The person who remits merely sends notice to the right person to go to the postoffice and apply for the money. Where this usage prevails the postoffice issues a crossed order because the sender cannot cross the order himself. Such is the practice, for instance. Italy.-New York Tribune.

DRIVING A DRUMMER.

CRANKY TRAVELER PUNISHED BY A CLEVER LIVERYMAN.

A Wild Winter Ride Behind a Pair of Half Broken Mustangs-Mixing Candy Samples on a Corduroy Road. Unrespectful Words Resented.

[Special Correspondence.]

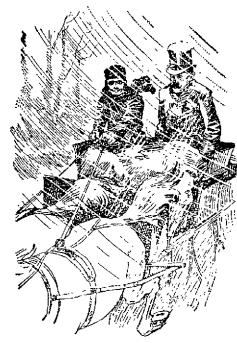

LUDINGTON, Mich., Jan. 10.—The old fashioned American "livery," as we in this country term a stable from which borses and carriages are let out for hire, flourishes in this part of Uncle Sam's farm in all its pristine glory. Moreover, the drivers who are sent out with customers who do not themselves care to handle the ribbons are surely of the who can rush off and buy a skating real old sort, albeit they are of various suit and others bring out the suit laid nationalities, and most of them under rather than over 30.

I encountered such a driver in the person of a youngster of Hiberno-Swedish descent who drove the team behind which I came hither from Hart a day or two ago. Being desirous of covering the ground in the shortest possible time without killing the horses, I set out at the beginning of the journey to jolly him up with complimentary words and began operations by asking if he had ever been unfortunate enough to have a crank who was in undue baste for a passenger. That question was the end as well as the beginning of my jollying, for it andammed a flood of reminiscences that flowed steadily till we arrived at this curious railroad terminal town. And here are two of his yarus, though half their charm is lost because I cannot reproduce the quaintly combined Scandinavian-Irish dialect of their spinner.

"Crankiest cu-s I ever drove," he began, "was a traveling man who said he had to get from Hart to Shelbyseven or eight miles-in 40 minutes. Twas in the winter time, mister, and colder'n blazes, and the wind was high and full of snow. Now, I shouldn't 'a' minded the feller a mite, but he told the boss as soon as he seen me that he didn't think I could drive fast enough for him. I looked like I was some slow.

"Waal, the boss he said I was all right and winked at me, and then I knew there wouldn't be no kick a-coming if I shook the felier up a few. So I hitched up a new team, mustangs they was, and not more'n half broke.

"Say, mister, them mustangs started on a run to oncet, and they never stopped a holy minute till we got to Shelby. That suited me all right, but 'twouldn't of made no difference if it hadn't, for I stylish all together. Cloth, woolly couldn't hold 'em no more than I could | woolens, cheviots and snowflake stuffs of held a team of steam injines. But it | are all in among the gowns; velveteens, was mighty uncomf'table for the feller. The driving snow got into his eyes and his hair and his mustache and his eyebrows. Besides, the mustangs throwed snowballs at us with their feet, and every once in awhile they hit him in the face. But he never said nothing, not but once. That was that we'd better let up driving so fast or folks would think light brown fur makes a handsome had to get there in 40 minutes, and he shut up real meeklike. We got there on time, and after he got out he spoke again, but his teeth was a-chattering so he couldn't talk much.

"'Nother traveling man-sold candy and took his samples along-was in a hurry to get to Mears from Pentwater. That was in the fall before snow time. Roads was all mud and all fired rough, and we got out a great, big, heavy buggy for the trip. It was old and it looked tumble down, but it was all right. He put his eyes on it and said he's afraid it would break down if we drove fast. That made me feel like I had a pain, for the old buggy was as strong as a box car. So I started off slow and kept a-going that way for awhile, and all the time be was a-kicking.

"Bomby we come to some corduroy road, and then I leggo the horses, and they started up fast. That stopped his kicking a few, but he begun again after half a mile. 'Twasn't 'cause we's going too slow, though. Say, the old buggy she jumped a foot every time we struck a log, and that was about oncet a second. That feller he said I'd break the better. That wagon was made special for fast driving over cordurey. Then he stood it a little while longer, and then he broke out again. This time it was about his samples, but it was hard work for him to talk, we was bumping around so.

"Don't you know-you'll-you'llmix my candies-all up driving-like this? Let up-for the Lord's sake-let

"Waal, say, mister, that made me laugh a whole lot. It made me put the whip to the horses, too, and after that we bumped around worse than ever. I kept things a-moving a few after that, though, till we got to Pentwater. We made the time and had some minutes to spare, but that candy man-say, he's all covered with mud and using bad language awful when we got there."

ATHLETIC COSTUMES.

New York, Jan. 9.-Right around

Fashion Seems to Aspire to Looks Rather Than Comfort. [Special Correspondence.]

New York there is really scarcely enough skating in the winter to make it worth one's while to get up a special costume for that exhibarating sport; but, hard as it is to make New Yorkers believe it, there are other places in this country quite worthy of notice, and in these places skating is one of the fixtures in due season. Here "the ball is up" perhaps twice or three times in a season. That means that a red ball is hoisted on a pole at Central park to show that ice is fit for skating, and all the surface cars hang out a white flag with a red ball upon it. Then all those by expressly for this purpose. Other and still wiser maidens sew a little fur on one of their useful winter walking suits, shorten the skirts a bit, and there you are! The addition of a chamois inner vest with sleeves makes it warm enough for the purpose.

In Paris there are some religiously ridiculous skating suits worn, just as there are absurd hunting costumes devised to give a woman an opportunity to show herself in something novel in England the ladies make themselves warm and comfortable and think less of their looks. They know that cold is no beautifier, and so they go in for a good time. Our American girls manage to look pretty, be comfortable and very also, but these latter are really rather beavy for free movement, bowever sumptuous they may look. A ruby velveteen trimmed with gray or black fur is rich and picturesque, making a bright dot of color on a wintry landscape. Hunter's and Russian green trimmed with krimmer or astrakhan or even a well as the band trimmings, are all accepted parts of a skating suit, and a collar high enough to protect the back of the neck and the ears is almost necessary, though some young skaters prefer the small, close fur boas for warmth.

Some skaters wear capes, but in many ways they are objectionable. The buttoued jackets and the fur or fur lined blouse waists are far better and more compact. A Havana brown cloth was braided with sontache three shades darker down each front side seam. The coat had pretty hussar loops and clasps. A glance at the illustration will show how they were arranged. A violet velvet turban, with a brim of Persian lamb and one black wing, was very jaunty and becoming. Close turbans are better than any kind of hat for skating save the polo cap, which had almost been forgotten. This is a most becoming little hat for any young face. It goes without saying that the underwear should be of the lightest and warmest kind, divided skirts of ender down being preferable to any other.

These same young ladies who skate in their fur trimmed garments come home balf frozen and later in the same day will put on a ball dress with no more warmth in it than a dewy spider web and, with a long and wonderfully decorated caps open where it should be closed, go out in the frosty night to opera or ball. A most beautiful one of these evening dresses was that worn by Miss Swayne, daughter of General Wager Swayne, who was one of President Grant's best friends as well as bravest generals. General Swayne, like General Sickles, lost a leg during the war. I knew this dainty young daughter while she was still in short frocks, only a few years ago, and it came almost like a shock to we to see that she is among the "society young ladies" of this season. She is undeniably pretty always, but when her bright spirits bubble over her face becomes a revelation of pink and white beauty where dimples, shining eyes and golden rings of bair flash into view. I think every one must like this bright and happy spirited girl. She wore a wagon sure, but I told him I knowed pale blue satin underdress, scarcely more than white so delicate the tint was. Over this was a skirt of pin dotted net lace, henimed at the bottom. Down the front of the skirt in shawl pattern went three rows of shirred white crepe lisse. The gathering thread was in the center, so that there was really a double ruffle to each. These all met in the back at the waist, and there was a wide tied sash of the crepe lisse. The waist was what we know as baby style, with a belt of pale blue twisted satin. Around the neck was a narrow upstanding ruche of lisse and a gathered bertha of the same held down by a twist of the satin.

This had six small rosettes of pale blue baby ribbon. There were no sleeves,

WILLIAM'S TROUBLES

THE SUPPOSED SOLIDARITY OF GER-MANY IS A FICTION.

Prussian Preponderance Irritating to the Other States of the Empire. Asharmonious Elements Made Man-Hest-Expulsion of Foreigners.

[Special Correspondence.] MUNICH, Dec. 28.—Since arriving in Germany I have had the conclusion forced upon me that the supposed and generally accepted solidarity of the German empire is a fiction. Identity of inretests and common sympathies, which nught to be distinctive of the relationships of the several states of the confederation to constitute a real union, I have now, a few months after Bismarck's death, as if but a slight shock were needed to shatter the grand political structure erected by his genius. In central and southern Germany a great deal of dissatisfaction exists, and in Bavaria and Wurttemberg especially, both the emperor and the empire are decidedly unpopular. During the kniser's recent visit to the orient this dislike became specially emphasized and was more freely expressed, but since his return this feeling is suppressed, as the fear of prosecution acts as a powerful restraint A great deal has been written about the homogeneity of the Germanic peoples and their common origin, but the fact of it is they are not homogeneous. and they are not of common origin. A number of years ago I read in Taylor's "History of the Aryan Races" that the south Germans were of Celtic origin, though for centuries they had spoken a German language. Ancient historical records are not very conclusive upon this point, but any person who has raveled through Bavaria, Wurttemberg, Baden and other parts of south Germany, if he keeps his eyes open and is of a reflective turn of mind, will be quite willing to accept the theory of a different origin of the inhabitants from those of other states of the Germanic confederation.

The observant student of ethnology will discover that the people of south Germany are almost invariably different in appearance, physique and disposition to those farther north that are of Mill: Chas. W. Cupples. 153 West Treundoubted Teutonic origin. It has been mont street: Rider, & Snyder Massilon. tersely said that "language is national-but this is only true in a limited sense. The use of a common language, though it undoubtedly makes the population of a country ethnically different. we's crazy. I just 'minded him that we skating outfit. A must and toque, as more homogeneous, cannot obliterate those racial characteristics which orignally differentiated the people.

I would not refer to a subject which is of more interest to ethnologists than to newspaper readers generally, but for the effect it may have upon the future Abail Drog isis, 2 w. history of Germany and the perpetuity of the empire. It should not be fergotten at the present juncture that the various kingdoms which entered the Germanic confederation are practically sovereign states. This is especially true of Bavaria, which was granted special privileges upon entering the union. It was Bavaria that first suggested that the king of Prussia, as president of the confederation, should bear the title of emperor, and it is in this kingdom that both the emperor and the empire are less popular than in any other portion of Germany.

The Prussians are and have been for some time heartily disliked in the other Cerman states. To discover the reason for this one need not travel far afield. The imperial family is, of course, more closely identified with Prussia than any other part of Germany. The great predominance of the Prussian influence in the councils of the nation, largely owing to this fact, has given deep oftense to the people of the semi-independent kingdoms and states. They resent the Prussian assumption of superior authority and their arrogance, and resent still more the reactionary spirit they display in their dealings with those of non-Prussian origin.

The reichstag, recently convened. will have a number of important measures to consider during the session. Among these will be a military bill, various measures framed for the betterment of the agrarians, and probably the wholesale expulsion of foreigners from Prussia, which has been in progress for some time, will also come under consideration. It is difficult to conceive the reason for this action of the government, though doubtless one is that foreigners are exempt from military service. Prussians, who are compelled to serve actively in the army for two or three years, and afterward for a term of years in the reserve, regard it as a hardship that people who do not belong to the country at all but are there for business are exempt.

But this, after all, may be only a minor reason, and the chief one may be more political. The Danish residents of the provinces filched from Denmark are decidedly unfriendly to the German government and devotedly attached to their own country. The same may be said of the Dutch residents of the districts bordering on Holland, of the Slavs and Poles in the Russian and Austrian frontier sections and of the numerous French sympathizers in Alsace-Lorraine. The government seemingly regards all these as sources of weakness to the empire and as spreading dissaffection, so to relieve itself of their presence it resorts to a very general expulsion of them from the country JOHN MAXWELL

What is even regarded as a vile weed can, with a littly stretch of imagination, be turned into an ornamental plant or delicious vegetable. This is especially the case with the common burdock, Lappa major. Schoolboys all know it from gathering the burs and compressing them together by the curved points of the floral involucie. This is all they know about it. It is difficult to see anything more to 13 despised in the burdock leaf than in the leaf of the rhubarb. It appears that it is largely used in China for food, but it is stated that ; if the stalks be cut down before the flowers expand and then be boiled the taste is relished equally with asparagus. Meanwhile they went about, until they came to the bridge which crossed the river. Here they saw an old man, with , white hair, dressed in rumpled linen coat and an old straw hat with tattered edges, bolding a fishing rod. But though they watched him a long time. he did not catch anything.

Then the children, who had been taught not to intrude on strangers. went away. They played about until the factory bell rang and reminded them of their dinner of cold mutton and mince pie. When they again passed the bridge on their way to the willow tree, they saw the old man still sitting with his fishing rod. Louis crept shyly up and politely said: "Please, sir, have you caught any-

The children went away again and watched from behind the bushes, but still the old man sat holding his rod, and not a fish did he catch.

"Do you know, Louis," said Jennie after awhile, "I can't enjoy my pie and mutton when I remember that that old man is hungry."

"I can't either," said Louis. "It's quite a big pie," said Jennie. "Let us ask him to have some."

Better Than Undrained.

To make one ton of dry matter in our grain crops, the use of from 300 crop of oat hay required over one thousand tons of water per acre, equal to about nine inches of rainfall. The average rate for field crops at large is given by European observers at 325 times the weight of dry matter produced, being at the rate of about three inches of rainfall actually evaporated through the plant.

To evaporate this water it is necessary that the ground containing the roots should not be too full of water. One would suppose that with water flooding the roots of the plants the latter would be able to take both food and water with added ease, but such is not the case, except with aquatic and semi-aquatic plants. With most plants the action of the roots stop at the point where they reach "flood" water. Thus if at the depth of eighteen inches "flood" water be struck, the roots below the eighteen inches will cease to operate, and if the water condition continue they will rot off. A bulletin of the California experiment station says on this point: "This is amply apparent in some of the irrigated orange groves of southern California, where the fine roots of the trees fill the surface soil as do the roots of maize in a cornfield of the Mississippi states; so that the plow can hardly be run without turning them up and under. In these same orchards it will be observed, in digging down, that at a depth of a few feet the soil is too water-soaked to permit of the proper exercise of the root functions, and that the roots existing there are either inactive or diseased. That in such cases abundant irrigation and abundant fertilization alone can maintain an orchard in bearing condition, is a matter of course; and there can be no question that a great deal of the constant ery for the fertilization of orchards in the irrigated sections is due quite as much to the shallowness of rooting induced by over-irrigation, as to any really necessary exhaustion of the land. When the roots are induced to come to and remain at the surface, within a surface layer of eighteen to twenty inches, it naturally becomes necessary to feed these roots abundantly, both with moisture and with plant food. This has as naturally led to an over-estimate of the requirements of the trees in both respects. Had deep reaches the liver, the excreting function rooting been encouraged at first, instead of over-stimulating the growth by surface fertilization and frequent irrigation, some delay in hearing would have been amply compensated for by less of current outlay for fertilizers, and less liability to injury from frequently unavoidable delay, or from inadequacy, of irrigation."

The above is an illustration of the drained land. On the latter kind of land the roots of plants remain near the surface, and when drouth comes land the roots strike deep and when drouth comes they are protected by several feet of earth in which is a fair supply of capillary water.

Europe Buying Our Wheat. Interest in the grain market centers in wheat and prices are holding fairty steady. A short time ago an advance of about 5c took place on the assumption that England and France would go to war. This was followed by a reaction of about that amount and a subsequent period of comparative quietude in speculative circles and a liberal movement in cash wheat on both domestic and foreign account. The situation as a whole is not essentially changed. America has a big crop, but farmers are not "falling over one another" to market their wheat, and Europe is a persistent and encouraging buyer True, the receipts since the new crop began to move make a liberal total, yet public stocks continue relatively small and mille, s are interested buyers.

While Europe, outside of eastern Russia, apparently has a fairly good crop of wheat, foreign buyers show considerable willingness to accumulate stocks at going prices, Russian shipments are below the normal, India is moving comparatively little, and Argentina's crop will not be ready for two months yet. The United States therefore holds the advantage of having a good portable surplus and a favorable outlet for it Unless our wheat is incontinently thrown at the foreign buyers it would seem that we ought to market it during the winter and spring at prices fairly remunerative to our producers.

Renewing Old Orchards, The best way to renew old orchards

after they have become very decrepit and broken is to plow them up. Reset your orchards with fresh young trees and you will gain more than by tinkering with devitalized old trees. This does not mean that in all cases I would cut down old apple trees. On the contrary, I would take great pains to preserve the life of an old favorite by careful removal of the suckers both from limbs and body. An apple tree ought to live to be 150 years old, bearing fruit all the time. This is true. however, only of seeding trees grafted high, and thoroughly adjusted to the climate. Many of our good orchard varieties are so susceptible to climatic changes and fungoid diseases that we can acarcely expect them to live beyond 25 or 35 years. Most of our orchards in these days die out before the end of 50 years. I own an orchard that has trees still bearing at 107 years ally, and notes secured by mortgage on the of age. It was the first orchard planted by whites west of New England.
